Prof. Lawrence S. Stepelevich, Editor The Owl of Minerva

July 5, 1981

Dear Dr. Stepelevich,

Bear Dr. Stepelevich, Humanities Press has called to offer me a contract for my latest work, Rosa Luxemburg. Women's Liberation, and Maux's Enilosophy of Revolution. They are thinking also of republishing my two other main works, Marxiem and Presdom and Philosophy and Revolution: From Hegel to Serves, and from Marx to Mao. All this flurry must, in part, be due to the fact that by 1983, the jubilee year of Marx's death, I, as an American Hegelian Marxist, will have chalked up a quarter century of writings on the dialectics of revolution. In any case, the publisher's call helped to remind as that I seemed to have disappeared from the Hegel Society of America cince the 1974 Conference when I read my paper, "Hegel's Absolute Idea as New Beginning." Serious studies have a way of eating up seven years in a single gulp. I should be reappearing soon. In the mean-time, I thought you might like to see at least the contents "Kerl Marx-From a Critic of Hegel to Author of Gapital and Theorist of Permanent Revolution."

You'll note that Part Three starts with Marx in 1841, when he was still a young Hegelian, working on his doctoral thesis, "The Difference Between the Democritean and Epi-cursan Philosophy of Nature." Did you happen to read it when, in 1975, the first English translation of Marx's Collected Works, Vol.1, in finally publishing his doctoral thesis, also published the massive Notebooks for it? They clearly show not just Marx's erudition but his proccupa-tion with Prussian censorship, so that his concept of free-dom of thought foreshadowed his becoming a "Marxist."

Recently, Philosophy and Revolution appeared in Ger-many, under the title Algebra der Revolution. Unless the reader happens to know that Herzen defined Hegelian dea-lectics as the "algebra of revolution," I have no idea what the bedderweulddmeatnk. Would The Owl of Minerva be inter-ested in getting a copy of the German edition? Please let me know and I'll be glad to send you a copy.

Sincerely, yours,

15278