NEGRO VOTE WAS OVERWHELMINGLY DEMOCRATIC; NEW PROGRAM NEEDED

By George Lavan Election returns have borne out what was apparent in the course of the campaign - the Negro people everwhelmingly supported the Democratic Party. In a eliminary survey of the voting in the Negro districts of 18 cities — both North and South — the Information on the number of votes received by Farrell Dobbs and Myra Tanner Weiss has not yet been made available by the election boards in the seven states where the Socialist Workers Party was on the ballot. First unofficial reports in few major cities reveal, however, that the SWP vote will probably be below our 1948 total of 14.000. The small vote was characteristic: There were slim pickings for all the radical parties at the ballot box in 1952. Judging by the New York returns, the national Progressive Party vote, well over a million in 1948, dropped to around one-eighth its size this year. The bottom dropped out of the Socialist Party vote. And the Socialist Labor Party, which probably spent more money than all the other radical parties together on radio and TV time, newspaper ads and leaflets, seems with 1948.

Trucks Act Moves To Supreme Court

The U.S. Supreme Court announced on Nov. 10 that it will rule on the constitutionality of Michigan's police-state Trucks Law on an appeal brought by the Communist Party.

The Trucks Law is one of the most flagrantly unconstitutional laws passed during the current witch - hunt hysteria. Not only does it violate free speech and free assembly but it has provisions that can be used against strikers and unions. The law requires members and sympathizers of proscribed organizations to register with the state police and answer any questions the police might desire to ask them. Failure to register carries a 10-year prison term and $10,000 fine. First action under this law was the removal from the Michigan ballot of the Socialist Workers Party. This move was later beaten.

While the Democratic majorities lost votes they had then but because they did not gain as many as the Republicans did. In fact, n almost all big cities the Democratic vote was slightly higher this year than four years ago.

In other words, contrary to the mpression the capitalist press tried to give, the Democrats lost the election not because of any mportant shift among the workers but because there was an inusually big turnout of "new voters" among the middle classes, and most of them went to Eisen-

Ford Union Resolution Proposes New Political Road to CIO and PAC

It is too early to assess the full effect on the American labor movement of the shock of the Republican landslide. But it is evident that among both the union ranks and leadership the impact of the defeat of the Democraticlabor coalition has induced considerable thought on the future political policy of organized labor. Some among the ranks and local leaders, like those of Ford Local 600, CIO United Automobile Workers, have already drawn the conclusion that reaction cannot be halted by dependence on the Democratic Party and that labor must build its own party. Some among the top union leaders are already indicating that they are ready to "live with" the Republican regime.

An encouraging sign is that union workers are not apathetically accepting the election results and are trying to figure out their meaning and what to do next. The Nov. 8 Ford Facts of Local 600 notes that "at the change of shift Wednesday morn-

During the last war when millions of women were added to the labor force, I got interested in how this changed the lives of women and the many new problems it legislative chambers for more and abysmal failure that he was created — that is, I thought they were new.

I found that millions of women were added to the labor force in the first world war. There was an influx of women into industry in the Civil War and to a more limited extent, even during the Revolutionary War. In the early part of the 19th century, the majority of workers in manufacturing industries were women. In other words, whenever there was a shortage of male labor, employers forgot about women's place in the home and were only too happy to hire

In the New England cotton mills of Lowell and Waltham — the first big industry in this country — 90 to 95 U.S. capitalism from a mass left- per cent of the employees were women. The interesting thing is that the use of female labor was deliberate policy.

Adult male labor was hard to get in America in those frontier days. Employers constantly emphasized the well-bred, ladylike behavior of the girls. One Lowell manufacturer boasted that no mill girl had ever had an illegitimate baby although there were a few hasty marriages. This again was in sharp contrast to conditions in the English mills and was due, of course, to the Puritanical training of the girls and was not a special achievement of the employers.

Eisenhower's Trip to Korea

The N. Y. Post, the only big newspaper in New York City that campaigned for Stevenson, suggested Nov. 10 that Gen. Eisenhower "pass up his trip to Korea."

The Post editors explain that during the campaign they considered Eisenhower's promise about bringing an end to the war in Korea as "just so much election oratory." They see no reason now why the promise shouldn't be filed in the waste basket as is customary with the campaign promises of the twin parties of Big Business.

This cynical attitude toward the election oratory of the Republicans is perfectly natural, reflecting as it does, the Post's attitude toward the election oratory of the Democrats which they helped write.

The Post is not interested in exposing this lying promise of Eisenhower's and trying to cash in on the rebound of the voters when they realize they were taken for a ride. They want to let "the man off the hook," as they put it. This magnanimity is not strange.

Like the Republicans, who promised peace in order to win the election, these Democrats understand that capitalism must conquer the world if it is to avoid depression and gain a few more years lease on life. They know that Wall Street views World War III as only a question of time, and they want to do everything possible to prepare for it. The Post's generous proposal is therefore an olive branch to the Republicans offering resumption of the bi-partisan foreign policy that led up to Korea and that was maintained up to the time of the election campaign.

But can Eisenhower thus cavalierly flout the sentiments of the millions of people who voted for him because they believed him when he promised to bring an end to the war in Korea? What about the effect of the too-sudden disil-

Brass Hat in the White House

The newspapers have been hailing the Republican victory as a "great personal triumph" for Eisenhower. That's their explanation for the fact that the General in most places outdistanced the other Republican candidates. Senator Tast questions this interpretation. If it was a personal triumph for Eisenhower to get 55.4 percent of the popular vote Taft observes sourly, then how do you assess the Republican victory in 1928 when Herbert Hoover got 69 percent of the vote? Taft may have scored a point there, although he should have continued and let us know if we can expect the General's popularity to prove as enduring as Hoover's.

Big Brass has taken over the White House. This is a manifestation of the trend long tremendous impact of Washington the decreasing to Washington the decreasing to the decreasing t

Many people, it appears, split their ticket, yoting for Eisenhower to register a protest against the war in Korea, against high prices, against high taxes and the whole "mess" associated with Truman. These voters may have felt considerable qualms about voting for a professional military man for President. Generals are deservedly suspect, especially when they begin to throw their weight around in politics. But the two-party system is designed to detour such progressive sentiments. In the 1952 election we see the startling paradox of a good deal of anti-war sentiment serving to put a professional militarist in the White

Labor Needs a

The past relation of labor as an active supporter of the administration party has been shattered by the election results. The relation of labor to the new regime is still to be formed.

This problem of the labor movement is really two problems. The rank and file of the union movement, together with many conscientious and sincere local leaders, want to participate in politics in such a way as to conserve union gains, increase labor's political power, advance the cause and condition of the working man and his family. Thus most workers have supported the Democrats in the belief — a mistaken belief in our opinion that this was the best available way to keep gains and make new ones.

The problem presents itself somewhat differently so far as the top officialdom of the trade-union movement is concerned. Of course, these top officials cannot be entirely contemptuous of the desires of the ranks, since their position in the unions is at least partly dependent upon their achievement record. But for them the political problem shapes up in another way. They like nothing better than to slide into an easy groove politically, and try to make some sort of frictionless relation to the capitalist government. This inclination on their part is heightened by the fact that their whole outlook is similar to that of the most reactionary capitalists so far as the chief political problems (Korea, the impending war, with the Soviet and colonial world, the defense

Is There an Opposition to Stalin in USSR?

By John G. Wright

One of the main preoccupations of the Kremlin rulers is, as it always has been, to keep on "consolidating" and "strengthening" their state machinery. Stalin slurred over this aspect of Soviet reality in his 25,000 word document, "Economic Problems of Socialism in the USSR." But Malenkov, the main reporter at the 19th conference of the Russian and quite emphatically on the need to "preserve" the state and strengthen it "to the utmost" -

"Limelight" is the first Chaplin movie in many years that lacks explicit political or social satire. Critics in the capitalist press have praised it for this. Nonetheless the Amerian Legion is pressing for its withdrawal because Chaplin's right to return to the United States where he has lived for 40 years has been challenged by witch-hunter Attorney General McGran-

In New York this will not be easy. In smaller cities, however, the Legion may succeed in preventing the public from seeing Chaplin's new master work. That's democracy for you.

"Limelight" has none of the social bite of "Monsieur Verdoux" but that is not to deny its beauty and artistic value. Why should an artist who has achieved great social satire not try his hand at something else too?

Of course, we socialists are gratified when a great artist focuses his attention on a big problem of our time. But we do not believe an artist is rigidly bound to adhere to such themes.

Wè do not tell artists what they must write or compose, as the Stalinists do. We think that the artist who follows a party order instead of his own inspiration cannot create anything worthwhile. And we know perfectly well that there exist innumerable human master works without any special social significance; and on the other hand many books, poems, etc., which are supposed to have social significance or Chaplin needs no excuse.

"Limelight" has, in fact, tremendous human signficance. This is not merely a story about people in the show business, as some of the critics wish to make us believe. It is a story about things that matter, about life itself - a serious film, serious like Shakespeare's tragedies with their comic interludes.

The elderly clown Calvero saves the life of Thereza, a lonely young ballet dancer who wanted to commit suicide. He rekindles her energy, her courage. This act of human solidarity not only affects Thereza but Calvero himself. With the strength she regains through his kindliness and and this was followed by a wisdom, she helps him surmount demoralization and defeat.

Despite disappointment and failure, Calvero never quite gives up in his pathetic ment the company wants to force struggle for human dignity and finally makes a triumphant come-back.

Why They

"They did it better (in New Jersey) with tear gas grenades. We used to use ammonia guns. Get a shot of that and you surrender. That's the way to treat them!" In this terse fashion, John Sheehy, exkeeper at Sing Sing, summed up his criticism of the negotiated settlement of the prison riot at Jackson, Mich., last May. His approach sheds some light on the cause of the prison outbreaks which have been hitting the front pages of the national press with increasing frequency.

"I saw a prisoner in a western state after he got a going over from a guard. He had been forced to stand while the officer, taking his time, swung on him unmercifully with a club for ten minutes. The man's head was open. His face was a pudding of blood. His lip was cut. One eve was closed. His nose was broken. Three teeth were knocked out. His cheek bore a deep gash. Two ribs were cracked. His knee cap was crushed. . . . His offense was speaking while in line." These are the words of David Dressler, former Director of the New York State Division of Parole. They throw a bit more light on the cause of prison riots.

A minimum of five states still have legal provisions for corporal punishment in their prisons, according to the N.Y. Post, which recently put the spotlight on prison conditions in America. Penal authorities agree that corporal punishment is practiced in a majority of prisons, even though the legal provisos may be lacking. The flogging of women prisoners at Wetumpka State Prison, Alabama, recently led to the warden's resignation. Last spring, Warden Roy Best of Colorado State Penitentiary, and eight of his guards were indicted and charged with flogging, chok-

The outbreaks at Jackson Prison come the closest to revealing the full story. Jackson is the biggest prison in the world. With a capacity of 6,000 inmates, it often houses up to 7,000. Many of the prisoners are forced to sleep in the cell block corridors. More than 1,400 of them are totally idle. Officials boast of the social service workers and psychologists attached to the staff. Their case loads run from 500 to 750. The results are virtually non-existent. JOSEPHINE BAKER, American-born Negro singer now in Argentina, may be barred from the U.S. if she ever tries to re-enter, Justice Department spokesmen declared. Officials are angry at Miss Baker because she has made bitter attacks on the Jim Crow system and the "hypocrisy" of U.S. democracy.

HOW TO PROFIT FROM WITCH HUNT was demonstrated by Robert Clifford of Sidney, Australia. He obtained four jobs in a row. Each day after getting a job he would make an anonymous phone call to the employer and tip him off that the new worker he had hired was a Communist. In each case Clifford was fired and given a week's pay in lieu of notice. Police don't know exactly what crime to charge Clifford with.

INTERFERENCE WITH THE MAIL was the charge brought against the U.S. Post Office Department by the American Civil Liberties Union. The Post Office has been destroying books, magazines, pamphlets and mimeographed matter mailed to subscribers in this country from Sovietbloc countries. The Post Office does this without notifying the people to whom the printed matter was addressed on the grounds that such material is "propaganda." First inkling of this arbitrary censorship by the Post Office was revealed when David J. Dallin, bitter opponent of the Soviet government and an editor of the New Leader, revealed that publications to which he subscribed had stopped coming. He later learned that many university professors who followed the East European press for their studies also were being

Harvester Strike Still Solid Despite Michigan Vote Results Underscore

VOLUME XVI

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 - "Operation Scab," International Harvester's big push to smash the strike of farm equipment workers, has been stopped short by the spirited picketing and organizéd action of the strikers.

The company offensive shifted from the McCormick works over to the Tractor plant after failing to dent the strike in the former plant. The Tractor plant strikebusting moves began with the usual mounting company claims of "workers returning to work," barrage of letters to strikers in which an attempt was made to sugar-coat the yellow-dog agree-

As this offensive mounted, two scab-herding foremen's front porches were bombed, and although no one was hurt in either biggest scare they could. A union statement condemned the bombing and pointed out that only for a steady stream of anti-strike

Proposals were adorned with offers of free chauffeur service to and from work, with cigars and whiskey thrown in. The company has also sought to get landlords to evict strikers from their homes.

In spite of all this the Tractor mination is strong. As one worker put it, "It's bad enough working think of going back without one,

Negro Convicted Of 'Leer Assault'

NUMBER 46

An all-white jury of farmers at Yanceyville, N.C., on Nov. 12 convicted Mack Ingram, 45year-old Negro sharecropper, of "assault" on a white girl who claimed that the defendant had merely "leered" at her from a distance of more than 60 feet. Ingram said he had mistaken her for a boy.

Ingram was given a sixmonth suspended sentence and put on probation for five years on complaint of Mrs. Edward Webster, 19, who admitted that he had not come within 60 feet of her at any time. She was frightened she said when he looked "curiously" at her crossing a field. She was dressed in dungarees. ### WHAT WAS NEEDED

A class struggle program of independent political action by labor could have swept the state. A campaign in behalf of a cut in the taxes of small property owners coupled with a stiff corporation and war profits tax, a series of bold actions defending poor farmers; and a demand for the withdrawal of troops from Korea would have won tens of thousands of votes from the Republican camp. Such a program the cynical gang of witch hunters, ing office.

Big Business also defeated the union-supported reapportionment proposal No. 2 by a three-to-two margin and carried its own proposal No. 3 by a five-to-four margin.

The Detroit Free Press openly hailed the further stifling of democracy in Michigan on the day following the election. "Rural control of Senate cemented!" it said. "Seven counties in South Eastern Michigan including Wayne, which has more than half the state's population, will elect 12 senators. A minority in the 76 other counties will elect 22 senators." In spite of this costly setback, Reuther has the gall to defend his PAC policy as "practical" and "successful"!

The Republican victory will raise stronger doubts in the minds of the workers about support of the Democratic Party. Many people ple report a greater interest in discussing the Korean war and
