

McCarthy Curb Decided by GOP High Command

By Daniel Roberts

NOV. 22 — A sizeable majority of the Senate favors censuring McCarthy. This fact emerges clearly after ten days' debate in the Senate. The leading censure proponents are conservative Senators, Southern Democrats and Eisenhower Republicans. In addition, such authoritative voices of Big Business as the N. Y. Times and the N. Y. Herald Tribune are firmly opposed to any compromise of the censure resolution. It is evident that the most decisive sections of the American capitalist class speaking through these conservative politicians and editors have decided to curb McCarthy.

In the Senate, with the exception of Sen. Case (R-S.D.), the members of the censure committee did not collapse when McCarthy accused them of being "unwitting handmaidens" of Communism. On the contrary, they demanded that even more stringent measures be taken against him.

Sen. Watkins (R-Utah) asked that his committee's recommendation to censure McCarthy be broadened to include a new count — namely that of smearing the committee in the debate. And Sen. Ervin (D-Miss.) advocated that the fascist Senator be expelled from the Senate. A number of other conservative Senators, highly indignant over McCarthy's charge that "the Communist Party . . . has now extended its tentacles to . . . the United States Senate," spoke in a similar vein.

That doesn't mean that the pro-McCarthy Senators can't filibuster and thereby prevent the censure motion from coming to a vote before the 83rd Congress ends its term of office. However, the relationship of forces has already emerged so clearly, that the Senate's failure to vote would not appreciably improve McCarthy's position.

VICTIMS LEAVE THEM COLD

Of course, McCarthy's persecution of countless innocent victims is not what motivates the decision to no longer give him free rein. Thomas L. Stokes, liberal columnist, writing on Nov. 16, is right when he declares "Sen. McCarthy is not being 'tried' for what has come to be called McCarthyism—that is, indignities heaped upon witnesses . . . slandering of innocent persons."

McCarthy's opponents in the Senate are firm supporters of the witch-hunt, as Sen. Johnson (D-Colo.) demonstrated when on Nov. 18 he proposed that the censure motion include a denunciation of the "Communist conspiracy" and a pledge of continued vigorous Senate probes of alleged "subversives." McCarthy's persecution of those whom Stokes calls "the smaller fry who can't fight back for themselves," does not stir them to anger at all.

But McCarthy's conservative opponents do resent deeply his

She was one of several thousand frenzied McCarthyites who went to Washington to put pressure on the Senate against the censure of McCarthy now being debated.

Laborite Right-Wingers Meet Stiff Resistance

NOV. 22 — The right-wing of the British Labor Party faces strong resistance in its drive to silence the insurgent Bevan wing of the party. The Attlee leadership, spokesman for the union bureaucracy and other conservative labor forces, wants to establish "unity" in the party for the forthcoming elections by disciplining the left-wing.

The Bevanites showed their strength in the debate and vote in the House of Commons over the Paris accords to rearm Germany. The right-wing leaders favored the pact, and the parliamentary fraction of the Labor Party voted by a narrow margin to support the accords. But, despite speeches in Parliament by Clement Attlee and Hugh Gaitskill, the fraction decided to abstain on the vote.

The N. Y. Times, Nov. 19 reports, "It may be that Mr. Bevan emerging from the shadows with a long, bitter speech in the House of Commons against the accords and the government and demanding negotiations with the Soviet Union turned minor reservations into major ones and contributed to this decision."

What the conservative leaders of the British Labor Party mean by "unity" is revealed in a story in the N. Y. Times, Nov. 30 which sets forth the thinking of the Attlee group. "It will be difficult to unite the party, which means disarming Mr. Bevan until the Attlee group disciplines . . . ten unrepentant rebels." These rebels include four M.P.'s who voted against German rearmament and the three editors of The Tribune, the Bevanite weekly. In a fake show of impartiality the Attlee group also proposes to discipline one right-winger who voted with the Conservatives.

Last month the editors of The Tribune, Michael Foot, Jennie Lee and J.P.W. Mallalieu denounced the strike-breaking policy carried on by Arthur Deakin, head of the Transport and General Workers Union, during the recent dockworkers strike. The Atlee leadership have demanded that The Tribune editors account for their denunciation or face disciplinary action.

"Trade-union leaders are not a special breed of humanity, always to be shielded from the rough breezes of democracy . . ." the Tribune editors replied, "We shall continue to print the truth as we see it." The right-wing bureaucracy has already succeeded in silencing Socialist Outlook, independent left-wing publication, over the protests of all the left-wing forces.

By Art Preis

There is one question raised in the past few months that the labor leaders have persistently evaded: Can American capitalism maintain full employment and an expanding economy without war preparations and war? At first glance it seems amazing that the union officials twist and squirm and duck on this question. They have expressed even more confidence in the capitalist system than the capitalists themselves. Why should they hesitate to answer this question in the affirmative?

On Labor Day, 1953, CIO and United Automobile Workers President Walter Reuther, amidst growing mass unemployment in the auto industry, actually declared "dangerous and reckless talk of depression" and called such talk "false communist propaganda . . . being bolstered by the prophets of doom in the American business community." It was the capitalists, you see, who were "prophets of doom." The following "New Year's Day, Reuther still chided the "men of

ASR Strikers Issue Call For Boycott

By Tom Denver

BROOKLYN, Nov. 23.—Last Wednesday the American Safety Razor strikers launched a campaign to boycott the products of the union-busting run-away corporation. Hundreds of strikers, aided by relatives and sympathetic workers, marched in front of Borough Hall to publicize their case in downtown Brooklyn. At the same time a motorcade of strikers' cars toured the centers of the city.

The demonstrators carried placards calling for the boycott of the following ASR products: Gem, Pal, Personna, Treet, Blue Star and Silver Star razors and blades, Eveready brushes and Ascot cigarette lighters.

SHOW TENACITY

The wide participation of the ASR workers in these actions, in addition to their continued day-to-day slugging on the picket line, shows what tenacity and determination they have in their struggle to win the contract agreed on by the company last August.

At that time the company agreed to guarantee jobs until March 1955 and provide $1,000,000 in pensions and severance pay when the company completed its plans to move to Staunton, Va.

DELIBERATE RUN-AWAY

The ASR management broke off contract negotiations at the last moment when the union refused to sign a "silence pledge," over what turned out to be a deliberate run-away.

Despite the heroic efforts of the rank and file, the danger is growing that the company will come out on top in its effort to smash Local 475 of the United Electrical Workers (Independent). The main weakness of the strike is that the ASR workers are forced to rely solely on their own limited resources.

CAN STOP ATTACK

New York's labor leaders could stop this union-busting attack if they would come to the aid of the ASR workers. This action would strengthen the entire labor movement in the area. New York unionists should demand that their officials break their silence and help the ASR strikers.

New York workers should join the ASR picket line, 315 Jay St. and send money for strike relief to Local 475, UE, 160 Montague St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

NAACP Pushes Fight To Save Walter Irvin

In its last-ditch battle to save Walter Lee Irvin, victim of a Jim-Crow frame-up, lawyers of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People on Nov. 20 filed a petition with the U.S. Supreme Court. The petition asking for a hearing on its request for a new trial charged that Florida officials had used perjured and fabricated evidence to obtain the conviction of Irvin who for five years now has been in the Florida death house.

These charges were the NAACP's follow-up on the legal move which saved Irvin's life on Nov. 7, the day before he was scheduled to be executed.

FAKED EVIDENCE

The NAACP told the Supreme Court that Florida authorities did not deny faking and suppressing evidence in the "Little Scottsboro Case" earlier this month when the Florida Supreme Court was asked to grant a new trial. The Florida court refused to stop Irvin's execution nonetheless.

One of the faking-of-evidence charges was that Florida officials took a shoe from Irvin's home after his arrest and made a footprint with it at the scene of the crime. Indeed, it is not known if the crime, an alleged rape, ever took place. The woman who cried rape was examined by a white doctor a few hours later. This doctor was never called to the witness stand by the Florida prosecutor, although the defense repeatedly asked that he be called. The prosecution's refusal to allow testimony from this doctor is part of the suppression

PROTESTS MOUNT

In the meantime, it is reported that Governor Johns' office in Tallahassee has been flooded with telegrams protesting his attempt to rush Irvin to the chair. Such telegrams were requested by the NAACP. Individual protests and resolutions from unions and other organizations are still important. Should the Supreme Court refuse a new trial Irvin's life will be solely in the hands of the Florida officials.

DETROIT AUTO WORKERS AID URW PICKETLINE

DETROIT, Nov. 18 — CIO United Automobile Workers members, including several prominent local leaders, this week mobilized picketline aid for a sister union, CIO United Rubber Workers Local 452, at the Midwest Rubber Co. plant in Warren Township of nearby Macomb County.

A company official announced yesterday the plant would be closed "until further notice" after several company executives got into clashes Tuesday with the reinforced picketline. Union spokesmen charged Midwest's president tried to run down pickets with his car and attacked them with a 14-inch wrench.

FOLLOWS SQUARE D

The demonstration of union solidarity is the second within recent months to reveal the determination of militant auto workers here not to allow strike-breaking and scab-herding in this area. In September, UAW and other CIO union members came to the aid of the independent United Electrical Workers strike at the Square D plant here after police used force and violence to herd scabs through the picketline. The UE is not affiliated with the CIO and is under attack as allegedly "Communist-infiltrated."

The same UAW locals and leaders who took the lead in the Square D action were in the forefront of the present battle, which, however, involves a sister CIO union. Ford Local 600, Detroit Steel Products Local 351, Plymouth Local 51, Chrysler Body Local 212 and Local 490 were among the more than a dozen auto locals represented in the picketline Tuesday. Local 600 President Carl Stellato, 361 President Paul Silver, 51 President William Manley and 212 President Kenneth Morris led their members on the line.

REFUSED CONTRACT

The labor struggle began when Midwest Rubber refused to renew the union contract last April at its old plant at 17277 Conant. It had operated non-union for seven years and its first contract expired in July. The strike began with opening of negotiations on April 23. The Warren Township picketline was set up at a new plant the company tried to open up without a contract last week.

8 CONTEMPT CITATIONS HIT CIVIL RIGHTS OF ALL

NOV. 23 — A federal grand jury in Washington, D. C., yesterday returned eight contempt citations that seriously injure civil liberties. The indictments were brought against witnesses who refused to answer questions of the witch-hunting House Un-American Activities Committee, headed by Rep. Velde, about alleged Communist activities and associations.

Each indictment features a key aspect of the witch hunt. Marcus Singer, Professor of Zoology at Cornell University, allegedly answered questions about his past membership in the Communist Party, but refused to answer about associates, claiming protection of the Fifth Amendment.

MORAL SCRUPLES

Similarly, Bernard Deutch, student at the University of Pennsylvania, allegedly admitted membership in the CP but refused to finger associates or meeting places because of moral scruples.

John T. Watkins, a CIO United Auto Workers official, refused to name Communist Party members or former members, though denying past membership himself. He contended the committee had no right to expose individuals publicly.

HIS REAL REASON

The real reason Reuther is obstructing the struggle for the shorter work-week does not have to do with output and "flexibility" in war production. It has to do with the program of action required to win the demand. This demand cannot be won without a major fight and it is the fight that Reuther opposes.

AGAINST PRYING

Mrs. Goldie Watson, teacher in an elementary school in Philadelphia refused to cooperate with the Velde committee, claiming that under the First Amendment it was forbidden to pry into her political beliefs. But the federal government and the grand jury disregarded the free-speech amendment and indicted Mrs. Watson.

See 'Armed Truce' in New Turn

By Joseph Keller

"Co-existence" — Moscow's propaganda term for enduring peaceful relations between the Soviet bloc and the capitalist powers — was treated like a dirty word in the American press until a few weeks ago. Now it is practically a household phrase, fit even for use before the children. This change is more than literary. It marks a major decision of the ruling capitalist circles to lessen the tensions engendered by the "cold war" against the Soviet Union and to come to some sort of formal agreement with the Soviet bloc for what Eisenhower calls a "modus vivendi" — a way of "living together" despite sharp antagonisms and differences.

The degree of the turn was demonstratively indicated by Eisenhower on Nov. 10 at his press conference following the shooting down of an American military plane over Russian-claimed islands north of Japan. Instead of the fire-breathing declarations we had come to expect under such circumstances, Eisenhower maintained a "moderating view" (N. Y. Times) and a "calm, quieter attitude" (Christian Science Monitor). In Moscow, Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen attended a Soviet social reception only one hour after the plane incident occurred.

WHAT IS NEW

It is nothing new for the Administration to express pious hopes and wishes for peace. What is new is that the White House is publicly adopting a policy which is bitterly opposed by the extreme right-wing of the Republican Party, including elements like Senator Knowland of California and Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin. The administration, at least in its public pronouncements and formal attitude toward the Soviet peace proposals, had previously appeased the right-wing and expressed a "tough" attitude toward Moscow and Peking.

When Knowland, on Nov. 15, sharply attacked the Administration's foreign policy and called the "peaceful co-existence" proposals of Moscow a "Trojan horse," Eisenhower the very next day replied by again publicly advancing a plea for a "modus vivendi." That same day Secretary of State Dulles also favorably employed the same term and Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said that the U. S. and USSR had to live in "peaceful co-existence" or "look forward to war." He said, "We are all on the same planet" and "it must be done." Sen. Wiley, Republican chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, on Nov. 19 attacked the "loose talk" of the critics of Eisenhower's "modus vivendi" policy.

DEMOCRATS AGREE

The Democrats—under whose administration the "cold war," "containment" policy and Korean war were instituted—have also come around to the "co-existence" point of view. Sen. Estes Kefauver, of Tennessee, said in an article in the Nov. 21 Newark Sunday Star-Ledger: "In this new Congress things will be different. The new majority leader won't be harassing the administration into an 'Asia First,' 'preventive war,' 'massive retaliation' and 'agonizing re-appraisal' approach . . ."

SENTIMENT ABROAD

This attitude of American imperialism's chief political agents of both parties is but a faint echo of the fervent advocacy of "peaceful co-existence" abroad. Churchill on Nov. 9 reiterated his belief "that the powers of the West and East should try to live in a friendly and peaceful way" (Continued on page 3)

Reuther's Strategy Banks on War Boom

little vision" who "talk of the inevitability of recession or depression."

What gave Reuther his assurance that rising unemployment was not a sign of an economic plunge or that a depression could be averted? His silence on the question of full employment as a by-product of titanic war preparations and war gives a certain tip-off on the trend of his thinking. He, like AFL President George Meany and most of the other top union bureaucrats, anticipate bigger war spending, more furious war preparations and a steady rise in giant militarism to hold up the sagging capitalist economy. Indeed, they not only expect it, they demand it.

THEIR PROGRAM: WAR

At the AFL convention last September, Meany attacked Eisenhower, among other things, for slightly reducing the war budget. Meany actually called for a bigger "defense" program. The monstrous $42-billion a year direct war spending by Eisenhower was "not enough." It is true that the AFL reaffirmed its support for the shorter work week with no loss of weekly pay as the immediate answer to unemployment. But it was evident from Meany's remarks that what the AFL officialdom are banking on to keep employment at a high level is an expanded war preparations program. No fighting campaign was mapped to win the 30-hour week at 40 hours' pay.

PHONY ARGUMENT

Reuther has been even more openly dedicated to war spending and war as the keystone of labor's policy on unemployment and the real guarantee of steady jobs. He has motivated his opposition to the 30-hour week as a contract demand within the next three years on the pretext that there should be no decrease in war contracts and no diminution in war production. A shorter work-week, according to him, might interfere with greater war output.

Of course, even from the standpoint of Reuther's jingo argument, the shorter work-week would not reduce total production, either for war or peace. To begin with, automation and improved technology generally are increasing man-hour output at a tremendous rate. There are hundreds of thousands of auto workers laid off and increasing hundreds of thousands of school graduates and women workers who would be available to raise total production by increasing the working force under a shorter work-week.

Besides, Reuther well knows that the 30-hour week does not refer to the number of hours workers would be permitted to stay on the job. It simply means that 30 hours becomes the maximum hours the workers can be employed without PAYMENT OF OVERTIME. Instead of paying overtime after 40 hours a week, as is the case generally at present, overtime would be required after 30 hours.

It wasn't so long ago that we had a 48-hour week generally and it was the fight of the CIO in the Thirties which played a great role in reducing the work-

American Way of Life Fugitive from Chain Gang

In Philadelphia Edward Brown, a native of the "land of the free," sits in jail waiting. The courts of Pennsylvania have said he must be extradited to Georgia. Sympathizers of Brown have petitioned the Governor to refuse extradition. What follows will be more readily understandable if it is stated here that Brown is a Negro. Here are excerpts of his story as related in a Nov. 12 Memoranda by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

On April 24, 1937, at Macon, Ga., Brown, having a severely cut finger, hailed a taxicab to take him to the hospital. A woman, under the influence of liquor, hailed the same cab and insisted that she wanted it. Her husband, Julius Kemp, drew a switch-blade knife and attempted to cut Brown. Brown pushed Kemp away, but as he did so, Kemp was cut in the neck while still holding the knife.

The cab driver then drove both men to the hospital, but they were ignored by the attendants for two hours. While waiting, Kemp bled profusely and evidently died from the loss of blood.

The authorities arrested Brown and charged him with murder despite his plea of innocence and self-defense in the accident.

A lawyer was obtained and received from Brown's family between $150 to $200. He complained that this sum was not enough and advised Brown to change his plea of not guilty to guilty with the assurance that he would get off with a light sentence. Brown followed his lawyer's advice and was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment on the chain gang.

Shortly after his imprisonment, Brown testified that double shackles were placed on his feet; his legs were chained together with a twenty foot chain and a fifteen pound ball at the end of it. Also, picks were placed on his legs which impeded his walking and which would hit him on the buttocks whenever he walked. He was beaten constantly with blackjacks and rubber hose; liniment was poured into his rectum, and he was placed in a sweat box, a small structure too small for anyone to stand or lie down in and which was exposed to the heat of the sun with no ventilation, except a two-inch opening leading to the tin roof.

His job was to dig ditches which were waist-high in water and in swamps, infested with poisonous snakes, without any protection. Brown escaped on December 19, 1937, but was captured June 21, 1940. He did not contest the extradition then because he was assured by the authorities that the entire Georgia penal system had been modernized. But the moment he was taken back to Georgia he was mercilessly beaten, shackled again, and placed in a sweat box with picks, ball and chain.

This time, when Brown was not in a sweat box, he had to carry 14-foot long stringers weighing 175 to 200 pounds and was beaten constantly by guards when he did not walk fast enough. While carrying a stringer, he broke his leg and was denied medical treatment for two days. As a reprisal for telling the doctor how his leg was broken, he was ordered back to work immediately. The guards, as further reprisal, rubbed the soles of his feet with corn cobs and then dipped them into a strong liniment solution.

On September 22, 1940, Brown again escaped and remained at liberty until 1947, when he was recaptured. Although the Georgia prison authorities swore that such treatments did not exist anymore as the chain gang had been abolished and a new system installed, Brown received the same treatment as before. One time he was hung up to a tree by the wrists and beaten until blood dripped from his body. Another time he was staked to the ground and molasses poured over him to attract insects and animals. On this occasion the warden's son urinated in his face. Still again he was stretched in a device resembling the medieval "rack." His back was injured and he spat blood for a week thereafter.

Brown escaped again in 1950. This time he made his way to Philadelphia. He was arrested on March 31, 1952, upon the request of the authorities of Georgia. On April 23, upon requisition of Gov. Talmadge, a warrant for Brown's arrest and extradition to Georgia was issued by Gov. John S. Fine of Pennsylvania.

At the extradition hearings it was revealed that during the periods when he was free, Brown obtained legitimate and gainful employment and conducted himself as a law abiding citizen.

"Rags-to-Riches" Rise of Texas Oilman

By John G. Wright
HUGH ROY CULLEN, A Story of American Opportunity, by Ed Kilman and Theon Wright. Prentice-Hall Inc., 1954. 376. viii pp. $4.00.

This book is about H. R. Cullen, a Texas oil tycoon, one of the richest men in this country, and by this token in the world. As the subtitle indicates it is a rags-to-riches story, a modern biographical version of the once popular Horatio Alger fables. As a success story, despite the somewhat breathless writing of the two biographers, the book limps a little. It is, however, of considerable importance as a political document of our times.

In the course of the last war and the postwar boom years, a new segment has been added to America's ruling families, which numbered three score in the prewar years. Among these newcomers the fabulously wealthy men of the South, in particular Texas, play a key role.

Behind McCarthy and the incipient fascist movement he heads are many of these Texas millionaires. The extent to which Cullen himself has backed McCarthy is a moot question. But it is unquestionable that Cullen's political views and the role he has sought to play are characteristic of this new crop of Southern multi-millionaires. Of Cullen, his biographers say that "he had assumed a kind of benevolent protectorate over the political affairs of his state and country." We shall presently see what is the essence of this "benevolent protectorate."

SUCCESS STORY
A few words about Cullen's success story. He married a rich merchant's daughter, and entered the cotton brokerage business through his brother-in-law in the cotton-picking business and spent more than 12 years in it, but he ended up as a comparative failure. "I work like hell... but the banks get all the money." He therefore decided to switch to the real-estate business, moving from Oklahoma to Houston, Texas. After seven years he found the real estate business "not so thriving" and decided "to return to the cotton business." But he found himself again stymied and accepted an offer to enter the oil lease business because "he (Cullen) was not doing too well in real estate and cotton."

There followed, in the words of his biographers, "three years of hard and unrewarding effort." In brief, Cullen was still floundering when others of his generation, with his background and connections (he comes from a family of Southern aristocrats) had long since made their fortunes in the course of World War I and the fabulous boom of the Twenties. For 12 years Cullen continued to flounder in the oil fields. The break came in 1927 when he entered into a partnership with multi-millionaire Jim West, who had made millions in cattle and lumber and wanted to make some more millions in oil. "To make a success of that, too."

This partnership was the essential ingredient in Cullen's rise to fame and fortune. By 1929 there were "huge oil reserves for Cullen & West," a combine that "had become an established oil operator." Many a wild-catter made far richer strikes than Cullen ever did in his own wildcatter days but died a pauper for lack of "opportunity,"—that is, for lack of a millionaire partner.

From a millionaire in 1929 Cullen went on to become a multi-millionaire in the depression years. He has since "given away" hundreds of millions, that is, instead of waiting till he died, he formed the Cullen Foundation, while still alive, a "charitable foundation... exceeded only by the Rockefeller and Ford Foundations."

BEHIND THE SCENES
Cullen's biographers openly boast that their hero is a "behind-the-scenes power in national politics" and that over the years "he had built up an indefinable but nonetheless effective group of political leaders, chiefly in Congress, who were loyal to him and his ideals." Senator Dirksen of Illinois is mentioned as one of this group.

Cullen was one of the chief promoters of the Tidelands Bill. Among other political feats accredited to him by his biographers are: helping the Dixiecrats in 1948; selecting Eisenhower as Republican candidate as early as 1949; getting Stassen "to get in the Presidential race to stop Taft"; engineering "the revolt of the Texas Republicans which paved the way" for Eisenhower's nomination in July 1952; and, more recently, all-out support for the Bricker amendment.

A Republican since 1928, Cullen has been an avowed opponent of "creeping socialism" in Washington. He abominated Roosevelt; and after initial illusions about Truman, he abominated "Truman and his bunch of socialists in Washington." "Rugged individualist" Cullen, like his colleagues, discovered socialism even in individuals such as Stassen. "Mentally," Cullen told Stassen, "you are a conservative, but at heart you are a socialist." Stassen had once flirted with the idea of "World Union" and this branded him forever as a "socialist emotionally" in Cullen's eyes. And not in Cullen's eyes alone.

The power wielded by the new Southern tycoons is illustrated graphically by the pilgrimages made to Texas by every likely candidate for the 1952 Republican presidential nomination. Eisenhower went to Houston (Dec. 7, 1949) so did Taft, MacArthur, Stassen, even the "dark horse" Dirksen. "He (Cullen) talked it over with the Senator, suggesting that he (Dirksen) should keep in line for the Vice-Presidential nomination. Dirksen agreed..."

"KING-MAKER"
In March 1951, Cullen wrote a letter to Eisenhower then in Europe: "I feel certain that you will be offered the Republican nomination for President in 1952..." When Taft came to Houston in March 1952, he asked Cullen to enter, and asked "How does it look to you, Roy?" "I admire you, and I believe in you Senator — but I don't think you can win, even if you are nominated," Cullen answered.

These heart-to-heart talks with presidential candidates, the snatches, quite revealing, from the "Dear Ike" — "Dear Roy" correspondence, the details about Cullen's maneuvers in Texas and on the national scene disclose a king-maker in action. Perhaps the biographers exaggerate Cullen's role, perhaps not. Here again, we are not dealing with an individual aberration. Cullen is one of the new draft of the men of wealth and power in the South who really rule this country, make important decisions and seek to impose them. Like Cullen, they are reactionary to the core. If Cullen is any indication, they really intend, as they already have done, to throw their weight around.

What Is Economics?

By John Thayer

WHAT IS ECONOMICS? by Rosa Luxemburg. Pioneer Publishers, New York, 1954. Price $1.00 (mimeographed, stiff cover).

Now for the first time the English reader has available Luxemburg's stimulating lectures on Economics. These lectures were given at a school conducted by the German Social Democratic Party every winter from 1903 to 1913. While in prison during World War I she prepared these lectures for publication. Unfortunately some of the chapters were lost at the time of her murder when police ransacked her rooms.

Nonetheless this first installment of those lectures is a treat in itself and it is hoped that the remainder of the extant lectures, that were to have composed a book entitled "Introduction to Economics" will soon be translated for English-speaking students.

What we have here are some 50 pages of Luxemburg's opening lectures. In an inimitably witty and erudite fashion she takes up the question of determining exactly what the science of economics is. To do this she takes the definitions given by the outstanding capitalist professors of the subject. These she examines closely revealing their shallowness and contradictions. After demolishing the bourgeois definitions she gives a historical sketch and Marxist definition of economics.

In the course of her exposition, Luxemburg calls up for testimony such diverse figures as the Holy Roman Emperor, Charlemagne, and the founder of evolution, Charles Darwin. Her whole treatment of the subject is remarkable for its unhackneyed style and original illustrations.

No matter how well versed in the subject the reader may be he will learn much from this book. Not only about economics but about Rosa Luxemburg, herself. The personality of this remarkable revolutionist shines forth clearly from these pages. Here is the gaiety, insight, originality and love of truth that so endeared "Red Rosa" to the German workers and to all the internationalists who came to know her. Every class conscious worker should acquire What Is Economics? for his or her library.

15 Sealed in Mine

Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers (wearing hat and raincoat) stands grimly with a group of mine and union officials at Farmington, W. Va., as they watch the sealing of a blast-wrecked pit of the Jamison Coal & Coke Co. Fifteen miners were trapped in the pit. The action was agreed upon as flames turned the mine into a powder keg.

How Workers View Election Outcome

[In response to a request from a number of readers are sending in reports of the reactions of friends, fellow workers, neighbors, etc. to the election results. We shall publish more excerpts of these as they come in. — Editor.]

From Philadelphia, Pa.
A neighborhood tailor: "The question of war is not as important as jobs, inflation and income. The Democrats are a little bit better than the Republicans."

In a garment factory (International Ladies Garment Workers Union): "The workers expressed a hopeful but not too optimistic feeling, a sort of 'let's watch and wait' attitude."

In another ILGWU shop: "Everybody enthusiastic over the election results. The Business Agent said: 'Now we can give the Democrats another chance. If they fail, then there will be a Labor Party.' Unemployment is blamed on Eisenhower."

In still another ILGWU shop: "Workers are cynical, say it's the same either way. The worker is left holding the bag. They all voted for the Democrats, however."

A railroad worker: "He feels insecure about his job. He feels that the Democrats will make a change with a public works program, etc. Says these are half-way measures but helpful."

Among Negro workers: "The feelings seem mixed. One elevator operator appears to have great illusions as to what the Democrats will do. Generally there is a lot of skepticism but hopefulness."

Among AFL painters: "The day before elections there was a great deal of argument — Republicans stopped the war, Democrats stopped the depression — after elections they all agreed that both sides are crooks."

At the Westinghouse plant: "When Truman won in '48 there was jubilation. Eisenhower's victory in '52 caused a feeling of defeat. Now there was very little response. No elation over the State of Pennsylvania going Democratic."

Among Paper workers: "They voted for Democrats. Opinion expressed that there will be no difference as far as jobs go unless there is a war."

From Chicago, Ill.
An AFL bus driver: "Thought workers should be better off as result of Democratic victory. When asked if it wouldn't be better if workers had a labor party, replied, 'possibly but we should give the Democrats a chance now.' Queried if unions should form Labor Party for the 1956 elections, replied, 'No, but labor should be organized politically into a bloc.'"

A bartender: "He is definitely a Democrat and thought the election results good and that workers would be better off now. Had not thought about the possibility of a Labor Party in U.S. Believes that Democrats will try to make progress on school segregation, housing, discrimination in hiring, etc. but that they will not succeed."

A student at Chicago branch of the University of Illinois: "He thinks the election results a defeat for McCarthy and that they show a tendency toward liberalism. Thinks workers can get representation through the established parties. Does not see any probability or value of a Labor Party. Does not know whether the Democrats can solve the unemployment problem. He thinks they probably will not do much to end segregation and discrimination."

A beauty parlor worker: "Didn't vote because all politicians are crooks and phonies!"

From Detroit, Mich.
A retired Ford worker: He boasted quite proudly that he personally rounded up voters, arranged rides and did all he could to get people to the polls. "I was responsible for 63 people going to vote and I'm sure they all voted Democratic." It was his feeling that other workers had done the same as he — not as paid ward-heeler, just as workers anxious to get the vote out for the Democrats.

A Ford Local 600 worker: He stated that for the first time since he had been in the plants, since 1948, the workers actually feel that they were the power that put the candidates into office. For the first time they really feel it's a victory of labor forces.

For the first time they feel their force as an independent power.

Among workers in a restaurant: "I'm glad I'm a Democrat," one girl said. "What about the issues? I'm a Democrat, that's all."

Another girl said: "Well I'm waiting for all this prosperity to come to me. If it doesn't I don't know what I'll do."

Looking for a Job In New York City

Editor:
Here is how it looks at the Industrial Section of the N. Y. State Employment Service at 87 Madison Ave. in Manhattan. At 7:00 we are forced to get in a long line before the reception counter where you are questioned and your employment or claimant book is examined. The waiting consumes a half hour or more.

After the preliminary questioning at the reception counter, you are told to go to a specific unit. Then after a wait of an hour you are "interviewed." This interview is really a detailed questioning. Then if you are lucky and there are some jobs left you are given an introduction card and are told to go to the employer.

Thinking that at long last, after all this waiting and questioning, you have got a job, you thank the interviewer like he had saved you from drowning and rush down to the employer whose name is on the introduction card. On the way you think, "Boy, am I gonna make money! Now I can buy clothes and maybe take the girl friend to a show. Yeah, it's a real job this time. Maybe it's low wages but it's still money."

Then you reach the employer, your prospective boss: "Sorry, but we've hired some one else." The letdown is like a blow in the gut. You've been double-crossed and there's nothing you can do about it. You go back to the Employment Service and you get in line again. When, after a half hour you reach the reception desk, you are told, "Sorry, nothing today. Come back tomorrow morning."

Karl Marx had something when he said the capitalist society is made up of commodities. Only we're the commodities.

THE MILITANT ARMY

Literature Agent Janet MacGregor reports good sales of recent issues of the Militant in Detroit. She writes, "Bob and Dot sold nine copies of the Nov. 1 Militant at the Wayne County Council meeting. Then Sherry, Rita and Dot went to the NAACP meeting here and sold 13 Trumbull Park pamphlets and one paper. Six Militants were sold at the Ford meeting."

"We covered the UAW opposition caucus with the Nov. 8 Militant and J. T. Doty and Bob sold 31 copies that night. Three people came up to Dot and gave her a quarter for this very good paper. The next day when the UAW Conference opened we sold 33 copies of the Militant. And this was in competition with the Daily Worker being given away free, the union leaflets, a Civil Rights leaflet being passed out and three people from the American Socialist selling. This was done by Dot, Faye, Sherry and Bob. On Saturday we sold again and this time most of the delegates told us they had bought, but we sold 11 more making a total of 75 copies all together. Sunday Al and Sara covered the Ford Council meeting and here we had a very good response to the paper although many told us they had already bought the paper at the conference."

"Two of the enclosed subs are a direct result of our offer to mail four free issues of the paper. Sherry obtained one from a young worker and John and Rudy obtained one from a student."

San Francisco Literature Agent Gordon Bailey reports a good sale of the October 25 issue of the Militant with the back page feature of the fight against Jim Crow in the Los Angeles Fire Department. Three comrades sold 30 copies of this issue in less than an hour.

Boston Literature Agent Ken Saunders writes, "On our four week anti-fascist literature campaign—total sales of the Stop McCarthyism pamphlet reached 339 copies. Of the 339, 267 were sold door to door and 72 at three forum meetings. 29 comrades participated in the sales. We plan to do it again within the next few months and are certain that we can improve upon the above score."

New York Literature Agent John Taub reports a friendly response to the Militant on the ASR picket line. 30c in donations was given to comrades distributing the paper.

Seattle Literature Agent Helen Baker writes, "Jack, Ann and Clara broke new ground again in Militant sales. In one apartment house they sold six copies to old age pensioners and received an eight cent donation. They sold at four homes in the block and then stood on a street corner there and sold eight more copies. They received a donation of one dollar from a young soldier who stopped and discussed our ideas with them. He had never seen the paper before. Also they met a former subscriber on the corner and he gave them a six months renewal."

"All together they sold 18 papers, received a dollar and eight cents in donations and sold one six months renewal. A very successful afternoon. They feel that we can open that area up with a new route. We have so many route possibilities that we are going to have to get our customers in to help us sell to other customers."

"Charlie B. took his usual six copies. He tells me that next time he doesn't show up at work with the paper, there is a general complaint from his customers. Frank and I combined three of the old routes into one Sunday's work. We sold nine papers and two copies of Fourth International."

Many thanks to C. S. of Cleveland, Ohio for his donation of $2 to help print the Militant.

EINSTEIN IN PLUMBERS LOCAL 130. Following his remark that for a life of intellectual independence he would choose, if he were young today, to become a plumber rather than a scientist, Local 130 of the AFL Plumbers in Chicago made him an honorary member. Einstein thanked the local and wrote that its act "shows me that you did not mind my sharp remark and it might even be that you are in agreement with my motive for it."

RUMORS PERSIST of a coming merger of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union (Independent) into the AFL Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen. Last month Ben Gold, former National Committee member of the Stalinist Party, who for 17 years was president of the Fur Union, resigned. Patrick Gorman, president of the AFL meat workers said that a struggle over organization of leather workers in Peabody, Mass. recently lead to conferences between the two unions over a no-raiding pact on tannery workers. The reports indicate that the proposed merger plan would stipulate acceptance of full membership of Fur Workers into the AFL union without the elimination of any of the present officers and representation on the executive board of the combined union.

IF YOU ARE A NEGRO your chances of losing your life from fire is three times greater than if you are white, government figures on accidental deaths show. Other studies show that this figure is not accidental. The ratio of Negro residents in overcrowded, rickety, firetrap slums is very high as a result of the system of segregation in housing.

"$180,000 WALL" is the name union workers at the American Sugar Company refinery in Baltimore gave the partition separating Negro from white in the women's dressing room. The figure of $180,000 was arrived at because that was the sum the company saved every year by paying workers in its segregated Baltimore plant 10 cents an hour less than workers in its non-segregated Philadelphia plant. The wall was established by the company during the war when it first started hiring Negro women. Local 392 of the CIO Packinghouse Workers Union has agitated for years for the destruction of the Jim Crow barrier and the lower wages it symbolizes. The union won its fight this month and the wall has been torn down.

BRYANT BOWLES, head of the racist National Association for the Advancement of White People, has turned to anti-semitism in his fight for segregated schooling. Bowles told a crowd at Jacksonville, Florida: "I'm not fighting the Jews; they are fighting me. They jumped on me first and I am retaliating. They are the people who are telling you (and the Negroes) to mix. The National Association for Colored People is not a Negro organization. The bosses are Jews. I'm willing to help the Negro see that all his descendants will be Negroes." Bowles, who has been convicted of passing bad checks, and is in trouble over $1,200 in unpaid taxes, faces a hearing January 5th for slugging a Negro postman in the Capital.

TIME IS TAXES. The Kentucky Tax Research Association has figured that it takes the average man two hours and 35 minutes of each day to pay both his direct and indirect taxes.

AGRICULTURAL WORKERS recruited from Mexico are about to be subjected to new persecutions in the Chicago area according to persistent rumors. Many of these workers are technically illegal immigrants. Their "illegal" entry was often accomplished with the aid and connivance of U.S. border officials and big farm interests greedy for cheap, defenseless labor. Some of these Mexican workers have made their way north but the authorities want to keep them in the Southwest as a cheap labor force. The Illinois Division of the American Civil Liberties Union has prepared for the expected drive against these workers by publishing in Spanish and English a pamphlet explaining their legal rights and listing defense agencies to get in touch with in case of arrest.

You'll Be Safe after Mere 5,000 Years

Discussion on the deadliness of the new H-bombs no longer centers on their annihilating power when delivered on centers of population on a war scale. Eisenhower, Churchill and Malenkov alike concede that an H-bomb war might well finish off western civilization. What is now being debated most heatedly is the cumulative radioactive effects of the H-bomb and A-bomb tests being conducted especially by the United States. A discussion on this question in the British House of Commons is illuminating. From the Parliamentary Report, House of Commons, Nov. 2, we publish the following pertinent extract:

MR. ARTHUR HENDERSON (Rowley Regis and Tipton, Lab.) asked the Prime Minister whether, in view of the further nuclear explosions in Russian territory, he would propose to President Eisenhower and Mr. Malenkov that all nuclear and atomic explosions should be suspended pending the outcome of the subcommittee of the United Nations Disarmament Commission.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL (Woodford, Cons.)—We should all be much happier if there were no need for nuclear and atomic explosions. There are several proposals regarding the weapons before the United Nations; it is there that a solution should be discussed. The Prime Minister would be prepared to make clear, at some suitable time, his attitude on the question of a treaty or pact of renunciation by the leading world powers on the first use of the atomic or hydrogen bomb.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL said he considered that should be considered along with all other proposals to lift the cloud of peril from the world.

MR. PHILIP NOEL-BAKER (Derby South, Lab.) asked whether that suggestion had not been embodied in the Anglo-French memorandum which the United Nations Commission was now considering.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL: That is very good.

MR. PAGET (Northampton, Lab.) asked how many of those explosions it would take to make the atmosphere lethal, and whether they were cumulative.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL said he believed they were cumulative, and certainly an undue number of them might have very serious effects. He was informed, however, that 5,000 years was about the limit of the time during which the atmosphere would be afflicted. [our emphasis.]

There was some laughter at this, and Sir Winston Churchill added that he did not mean to treat in a facetious manner what was perpetually in everybody's mind.

While it is consoling to receive Churchill's assurance that the cumulative radioactive effects of the H-bomb tests won't last longer than five milleniums, some people like the Japanese are disturbed because prevailing winds and ocean currents have carried radioactive H-bomb clouds to their shores within days.

Hence, James R. Arnold, an associate professor at the Institute for Nuclear Studies, University of Chicago, suggests in the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists that such tests should be conducted, if at all, only within the United States, on the grounds that the nation has "some right to ask certain of its citizens to run special risks on behalf of all. This is the principle behind compulsory military service."

He adds sardonically: "Americans who were hurt would doubtless be properly indemnified. All the same, the taxpayer would benefit greatly, since the lowering of costs of the test operation would pay for any probable casualty list many times over."

In Washington, civil defense officials instructed the Senators before heading for shelters in a bombing to turn out all lights, close windows and doors, place classified documents in safes, etc. "That's all very fine," said Sen. Kilgore (D-W.Va.), "but what makes civil defense think anything or anyone will be left to lock up if the Capitol is hit by a nuclear bomb?"

A Stalinist Hangman Dies

Andrei Y. Vishinsky, who dropped dead from a heart attack Nov. 22, will not be mourned by class-conscious workers who know his real record. He was one of the infamous executioners of the Bolsheviks who led the November 1917 revolution that overthrew capitalism in Czarist Russia.

During the revolution, Vishinsky, as a right-wing Menshevik, fought on the side of the capitalists against the workers and peasants. He remained on the side of the counter-revolution throughout the bitter civil war period when the young workers state was assailed from all sides.

It was not until definitive victory was won under the guidance of Lenin and Trotsky, that Vishinsky finally decided that a career under the capitalist foes of the revolution no longer looked promising. He then switched sides. So far as can be ascertained, that was some three years after the revolution that he helped try to crush.

Things did not begin to look up for this careerist until after the death of Lenin. Then, as a member of the bureaucracy that began to take on more and more of a counter-revolutionary coloration he found his natural place as a follower of Stalin.

It was in the Thirties, when Stalin reached the point of making counter-revolution a deliberate policy, that Vishinsky came into his own. He was assigned the butcher's job of helping to liquidate the entire generation of Bolsheviks who had made the revolution. Here his true talents found monstrous expression.

He was the chief prosecutor in that series of macabre frame-ups that have gone down as the greatest of all time — the Moscow Trials. His role in the script prepared by the GPU was to denounce such figures as Zinoviev, Kamenev, Radek, Bukharin, etc. He made no effort to really prove them guilty of the crimes charged against them. He simply screamed at them as they "confessed," according to the demands placed on them by Stalin's secret political police, calling them "mad dogs," "cursed vipers," and so on. Although he was an expert in Soviet law, he denied the defendants the most elementary rights, and they with a pistol at their heads, after having been broken and demoralized, cooperated with him in this foul performance.

Vishinsky's most strenuous vituperations were reserved for Leon Trotsky and his son Leon Sedov, the main victims of the Moscow Trials. He accused them of masterminding an alleged plot to "overthrow" the Soviet state and murder its principal figures, above all Stalin.

Trotsky succeeded in exposing the trials as flimsy frameups even while they were being held. But this did not change anything for Vishinsky or Stalin. The victims were shot just the same or sent to a living death in the concentration and slave-labor camps.

A distinguished impartial commission headed by John Dewey, the well-known philosopher and teacher, made an exhaustive examination of the Moscow Trials and proved them to be deliberate frameups. That too was disregarded by Vishinsky and Stalin.

The answer of the GPU to this exposure was to push forward with their plans to kill Trotsky and his son. They succeeded in both projects. Sedov died under mysterious circumstances in 1938 while in a Paris hospital for an ordinary operation. Trotsky was murdered by a Stalinist agent two years later in Coyoacan, Mexico.

Vishinsky's reward was a series of high posts, the most well-known of which was his assignment to the United Nations as head of the Soviet delegation.

Now he departs from the scene having succeeded as a Stalinist careerist. He will be known in history for his principal achievement — participation in the murder of a whole series of the Soviet Union's greatest and most devoted revolutionary leaders.

...Cold War Policy Shift

(Continued from page 1) with each other." If the Prime Minister didn't use the phrase "peaceful co-existence," commented the N. Y. Times, "he said what amounted to the same thing." Attlee, head of the British Labor Party and former Prime Minister, didn't shun the word. He said the choice is "between co-existence and co-death." Nehru of India said the alternatives are "co-existence and co-destruction."

NO SUDDEN DECISION
The new openly declared policy to seek a formal "modus vivendi" with the Soviet Union is no sudden decision by America's top rulers. As far back as Jan. 12, 1953, in an article by Joseph Hansen, the Militant suggested the possibility of a turn in U.S. diplomatic policy because of the logic of the position of U.S. imperialism as the outgrowth of the unpopular Korean war, a position that would impel Eisenhower to "make up for the bad diplomatic position he inherits" from the Truman administration.

Ever since the stalemate in Korea, when U.S. military might was unable to smash the colonial revolution in the Far East, the leading capitalist circles have been considering the question of "co-existence." But, as Joseph C. Harsch, special correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, wrote on Nov. 4, "the story really begins with August of 1953 when the western world learned that the Soviet Union had succeeded in setting off a thermonuclear explosion, a hydrogen bomb."

proof that there was no more possibility for cheap conquests of colonial peoples in Asia and that U.S. intervention in Indo-China would mean another Korean war, only worse.

On Oct. 20, Eisenhower made a speech at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., where, for the first time, he conceded the impossibility of any victor emerging from an atomic world war because science has brought the world to a point "where war does not present the possibility of victory or defeat" but "only the alternatives in degrees of destruction."

WILL ANY PACT LAST?
But will any agreement by American capitalism with the Soviet Union really assure that "prolonged co-existence and peaceful competition between capitalism and communism" which Soviet Premier Malenkov described over Stalin's bier in March of 1953?

We are told by the leading capitalist papers that, as the Nov. 16 N. Y. Times put it, "Peaceful co-existence" does not mean in Washington what it seems to mean in Moscow." It adds: "All it means is that the principal protagonists in the world agree not to murder each other. In fact, co-existence in this sense has been in operation between the United States and the Soviet Union ever since they emerged as the principal powers in the world."

According to R. H. Shackford of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, writing from Washington on Nov. 22, the capitalist powers see the possibility only for "a 'cool' peace—something less dangerous, if not perfect, than the continuous threat of atomic and hydrogen-bomb war." While Thomas L. Stokes, in the Nov. 19 N. Y. Post, writes: "We face perhaps a long period of a sort of armed truce, which is what 'peaceful co-existence' likely would mean . . ."

more of its resources and manpower for peaceful production rather than for a war machine. That is why the Nov. 18 N. Y. Times cited as part of the "problem" of "co-existence" the "economic strength being developed by the Communist bloc" and "Soviet economic 'competition'."

STALINIST CONCESSIONS
The Soviet Union has consistently proposed to make some kind of peace agreement with the capitalist powers. There is nothing wrong with that. What is wrong is that the Stalinist leaders deceive the workers of the world about the durability and reliability of any pact with the capitalists. The latter have not even been able to keep the peace among themselves, despite pacts, for the past four decades. It is doubly wrong to use such a pact as a device to enforce class collaboration between the workers and their exploiters, to block the struggle for socialism, to put the lid on colonial revolutions for independence, to urge the workers to support the capitalist rulers and parties.

The Communist Party in America has already indicated it is prepared to betray every interest of the American workers in return for a deal between Washington and Moscow. It is lining up with one of the two ruling capitalist parties, the Democrats, and opposing the independent political action and formation of a class party by the workers.

Already, the Kremlin is reportedly preparing to concede to the rearmament of German capitalism and to its preservation at the expense of the German socialist workers. Aneurin Bevan, the British left laborite, is reported, in the Nov. 20 N. Y. Times, to have "confirmed on the authority of Premier Malenkov himself that the Soviets are not worried about the military consequences of the proposed German rearmament, however much they may dislike the economic and cultural trends in Germany"—that is, the capitalist system that bred Nazism and the war that nearly destroyed the Soviet Union in 1941.

Apologist for International Thievery

According to the Nov. 21 N. Y. Times, Rep. Emanuel Celler (N.Y.) — a liberal Democrat, no less — took a "critical look at Morocco and found it not yet ready for independence." What were his complaints? The Moroccan people, said Celler, can not be trusted to protect U.S. military bases or to protect the Jewish minority.

Both the American people and the Jewish minority in Morocco should repudiate Celler's attack on Moroccan independence. He performs a tremendous disservice to both people by endorsing continued French colonial rule in their name. That rule is so brutal that any one who supports it can only win the undying enmity of the Moroccan people and millions of other North Africans.

U.S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas presents a graphic picture of that oppression in Look Magazine, Oct. 19.

"The Moroccan program . . . of the French is mostly a curse and burden to the Moors," says Douglas. "The French have fastened a milking machine on Morocco and operated it for the benefit of the French."

He then gives the details. The Moors are serfs in their own land. Farmhands get no more than 50 cents a day. The disease rate is so high the French keep it a secret. Malnutrition is rife. Slums are the order of the day. "Child labor appears in a vicious form." Repression is savage.

Justice Douglas describes his visit to a rope-making plant, one of a number run by a French syndicate. "Most of the workers were Moorish children from 6 to 12. They worked by the piece, making 20 cents to 50 cents a day. A French foreman or overseer stood over them with a long leather lash, using it with fervor on the laggards. The lash is, indeed, the symbol of French rule in Morocco."

"The French know how to use terror in Morocco. It is part and parcel of their political rule."

But here is what gives the lie to Celler's claim that he is concerned with the Jews. "Moors doing the same work as Frenchmen get a lower wage," says Douglas. "A similar discrimination is made against the Jews [by the French!]"

In the name of the Jewish, Arab, French and American people, demand that the French troops get out of Morocco. Let the Moroccan people determine their own fate.

ROLE OF H-BOMB

It began to penetrate into the heads of the American rulers that the U.S. no longer had the monopoly on the supreme weapon of mass destruction. What that weapon could do to the U.S. in an atomic war was demonstrated by the U.S. Defense Department's own tests of an H-bomb last March. That bomb, as we then reported, added a new dimension to mass destruction, spreading a curtain of death over an area of more than 6,000 square miles.

The April 5 Militant described Churchill's loss of self-control in his address to the House of Commons on the meaning of the H-bomb. He wept when he contemplated total annihilation of England caught in the middle of an H-bomb war between the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

In May, the defeat of the French army at Dien Bien Phu at the hands of the Indo-Chinese independence fighters confronted Wall Street with the further

DID KREMLIN "SHIFT"?

The turn in the U.S. policy is represented as a result of some sort of shift in the Kremlin's position. Max Lerner of the N.Y. Post, on Nov. 14 speaks of "what has shifted the Russian position" and says "all peoples can live together provided none are aggressive."

This is the childish view that wars are the result of some people just being plain mean, ornery and "aggressive"—"bad guys" versus "good guys." But what material reason is there for the Soviet Union to start a war at all—at any time? She has no economic incentive—no pressure of amassed capital seeking profitable investment, no army of unemployed or the threat of one if it does not maintain war production. It is the U.S. which reveals all the material factors driving to war and it is capitalism as a system that breeds war.

America's profit system is choked by huge capital accumulations—"the vast amounts of money which are accumulating daily and for which suitable investments must be found," according to financial editor Ralph Hendershot in the Nov. 13 N. Y. World-Telegram. That is what impels toward a war economy and war or an economic crisis that will bring the country to ruin.

The Soviet Union with its planned economy, even though bureaucratically distorted, can only gain great economic advantage from the possibility of utilizing

FOR ENDURING PEACE

There can be no lasting peace under capitalism—only an armed truce that will sooner or later be broken under the pressure of capitalist economic and social crisis. This truth must be brought home to the workers everywhere. The road to permanent peace is through the socialist revolution, the struggle of the workers to end capitalist anarchy and to establish a decent cooperative, planned economic order. Anything that weakens that class struggle or impedes it helps to destroy the one weapon that can forever wipe out imperialism war.

The McCarthyite Intellectuals

Informed political circles in New York believe that James Burnham, renegade from the socialist movement, wrote McCarthy's speech which opened the fascist Senator's side of the debate on censorship. In that speech McCarthy charged the Watkins Committee members with being "unwitting handmaidens" of the Communist Party. The arguments and the manner of presentation closely parallel those developed in Burnham's writings and speeches since he became a spokesman for the fascist Senator.

Burnham is not the only intellectual to join the McCarthyite camp. On Nov. 16, the N. Y. Times published a letter attacking the Watkins Committee recommendation to censure McCarthy. In addition to Burnham the letter was signed by a number of other formerly prominent liberal and radical intellectuals, including Frank Hanighen, George Schuyler and Eugene Lyons. They were joined by William F. Buckley Jr., who represents a younger generation of McCarthyite intellectuals.

The defense of McCarthyism by these writers shows a significant trend among middle-class intellectuals. The intellectuals in the era when capitalist rule was stable upheld the institutions of capitalist democracy, defended civil liberties, and wished to harmonize the conflict between the capitalist class and the working people by means of enlightened reforms.

But the stability of U.S. capitalism is coming to an end. Since World War II, Wall Street has suffered one defeat after another at the hands of the colonial revolution. A depression is again brewing in the U.S. This points to a social crisis and a show-down struggle between Big Capital and the working people in the years ahead.

A feeling of insecurity about the future of the country already grips large sections of the middleclass. The Utopian dream of the liberals

Ruth Reynolds Wins Conviction Reversal

Ruth Reynolds, pacifist champion of Puerto Rican independence, has won a victory in her long fight against a frame-up conviction on a charge of participating in the 1950 revolt of Pedro Albizu Campos' Nationalist movement in the Wall Street sugar colony. U.S. prosecutors presented "evidence" that Miss Reynolds had stood up at a meeting of Nationalists (with whose aims but not whose methods she sympathized), and claimed this signified her belief in the use of force and violence. This was rejected by the Puerto Rican Supreme Court. Under the conviction, now reversed, this courageous pacifist anti-imperialist had already served time in prison, where she was subjected to extra persecution.

Civil Liberties Group To Hold Meeting

The Emergency Civil Liberties Committee has announced a meeting on "Your Stake in the First Amendment" for Thursday, Dec. 2 at 8:30 p. m. at the Biltmore, 2230 Columbus Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. The meeting will be chaired by J. Raymond Walsh, former Harvard professor, CIO economist and radio commentator. Speakers will be Corliss Lamont, philosopher and defendant in a contempt of the Senate case and Frank Serl, president of the New York City chapter of the National Lawyers Guild.

Paris Mailmen Strike

Staging a demonstration for higher wages, some 3,000 postal workers cause a traffic tieup at the Place Vendome as they march in Paris. They struck for 24 hours in protest against domestic wage policy of Premier Pierre Mendes-France, who has been in U.S. recently to work out plans for German rearmament deal.

World Events

THE FRENCH IMPERIALISTS are fighting "a strange difficult new war" in Tunisia, according to Barret McGurn in the N. Y. Herald Tribune, Nov. 19. Thirty thousand French troops are at present hunting for Fellagha rebels, operating in the mountains of the country and carrying on raid against the rich French farms in central Tunisia. The difficulty, says McGurn, flows from the fact that the "rebels melt easily into the native population, which protects them." The French government has demanded that the Tunisian government headed by the Neo-Destour Party disassociate themselves from the Fellagha bands, which call themselves a national liberation force. The Neo-Destour Party has been reluctant to disavow the Fellaghas, says Henry Ginienger in the N. Y. Times, Nov. 19, "for fear of being branded collaborators who have surrendered their nationalist spirit."

Despite the temporary strengthening of the positions of imperialism in Egypt and the check that the ouster of Naguib gives to the nationalist movement, the position of imperialism continues to be weak in the Middle-East, according to military analyst Hanson W. Baldwin's Nov. 16 N. Y. Times article.

So far, he says, the situation is not yet stable in Egypt and by the terms of the Anglo-Egyptian agreement, British troops will soon be withdrawn, "leaving a vacuum of power at a vital crossroads area that cannot be filled by any indigenous forces." The Turkish-Pakistan pact, which the U. S. government hopes will be a basis for a strong Middle-Eastern defense of imperialism, has proved, he says, to be but a "formalization of weakness." He also cites the growing Arab nationalist movement in the French colonies of Morocco, Tunisia and Algeria as undermining the positions of imperialism in the Near East.

"THIS IS NOT KOREA. IT IS NOT INDOCHINA. BUT IT IS A NASTY PIECE OF WORK JUST THE SAME."

This is the judgment of a French army commander fighting in Algeria against guerrilla bands of the nationalist movement. He was quoted in the N. Y. Times, Nov. 13. Last week, the Militant published the appeal of Messali Hadj, Algerian nationalist leader held in solitary confinement by the government of French imperialism, denouncing the French government for using violence against the Algerian people instead of granting its legitimate aspirations for freedom and self-determination.

PRESIDENT PERON OF ARGENTINA THREATENED TO TAKE ACTION AGAINST SECTIONS OF THE CATHOLIC CLERGY UNLESS THEY CEASED INTRIGUES AGAINST HIS REGIME.

According to Edward A. Murrow, N. Y. Times, Nov. 12, the speech followed a decision of the General Confederation of Labor to halt Catholic penetration into unions. On Nov. 11 the rail workers decreed that no local was to permit priests to attend its meetings. Murrow linked Peron's attack on the clergy with Pope Pius' recent declaration that the church's role was not necessarily limited to religion, but had to concern itself with political and social questions as well.

A FRAME-UP OF Major General Mohammed Naguib is apparently under way in Egypt.

On Nov. 14, the ruling military junta headed by Colonel Abdul Nasser removed Naguib from the presidency. Nasser charges Naguib with a conspiracy to overthrow the junta and replace it with a regime of the Moslem Brotherhood. He also charges that Naguib has the support of the "Communists." Last February the junta ousted Naguib as President of Egypt but restored him in April. Naguib is feared by the Army for the demagogic appeals he has made to workers and peasants. Since April he has been virtually a captive of the junta.

Nasser's recent coup follows new friendly agreements between the Egyptian and the English and U. S. governments.

THE CHURCHILL GOVERNMENT IN BRITAIN HAS ACCEPTED THE RECOMMENDATION OF THE BRITISH GUIANA CONSTITUTIONAL COMMISSION NOT TO REINSTATE ELECTIONS IN THIS COLONY.

"The argument is simple," says the Manchester Guardian, Nov. 4. "Any election held in the near future would be won again by the People's Progressive Party." In 1953, the British government ousted the legally elected PPP government headed by Dr. Cheddi Jagan, on the charge that it was pro-Communist. Since the commission believes that no changes in the constitution would keep the PPP from being elected, it recommends a "period of marking time in the advance towards self-government."

The recent elections demonstrated what was already well known. The Negro people — like the rest of the working class — voted overwhelmingly Democratic. However, there was an interesting exception to this in Maryland. There the Negro vote decisively defeated the Democratic candidate for governor, H. C. Byrd, and re-elected Republican Governor McKeldin. How unusual this may be gathered from the fact that McKeldin is the first Republican to be re-elected governor in Maryland's history.

Why did this take place when the Negro vote was being cast 70 to 80% for Democratic candidates in the rest of the country?

The mask of liberalism, that the Democratic Party wears outside of the Deep South in the effort — still successful — to capture the working class and Negro vote, slipped in Maryland. Democrat Byrd and his supporters — especially in the rural sections — in the heat over school integration and the Baltimore school demonstrations lost the mask of liberalism and revealed their ugly Jim Crow features.

The anti-Negro propaganda of the Democrats and Byrd's statements against school integration — all Maryland except Baltimore has Jim Crow schooling — convinced the Negro people.

Republican McKeldin rolled up a 94,000 plurality in Baltimore. Some Negro districts that normally vote three-to-one Democratic were reported voting as high as ten-to-one Republican. Statewide McKeldin won by a margin of 62,000.

This stunning defeat of the Democratic white supremacists undoubtedly gave great satisfaction to the Negro people and to all enemies of Jim Crow. But what perspective for political action does it open? Actually none.

In the struggle for equal rights the Republican Party is no alternative to the Democratic, nationally, or in the South and border states.

This was demonstrated by the political conniving that went on back in 1948 between the Dixiecrats and the Republicans. Again in 1952 Eisenhower's wooing of such racists as Governor Byrnes of South Carolina showed how deep any Republican "principles" on Jim Crow went.

Regionally the case is proved by the action of the Republican Party in neighboring Delaware. There a situation similar to that in Maryland existed. The activity of the National Association for the Advancement of White People around Milford brought the issue of school segregation into the election campaign. Did the Republican politicians conduct themselves more honorably than the Democrats?

At the height of the Milford fight the Delaware Attorney General told the court that both parties were pledged to the enforcement of the law and that if the court ordered integration resumed in Milford both U. S. Senators from the state (one a Republican, the other a Democrat) would lead the ten Negro children by the hand back into Milford High School.

Unfortunately he had failed to consult the "honorable" Senators. Both of them indignantly repudiated any such idea. In fact the Republican Senator was even more violent in repudiation than his Democratic opposite number.

No, the Republicans are no alternative in the fight of the Negro people against Jim Crow. Only the creation of a new political party — built by the Negro people and the labor movement — can open a real avenue for effective political warfare against Jim Crow.

Dewey, Lucky Luciano And the Tresca Killing

Patient following of clues in the case of Carlo Tresca, the working class leader murdered in New York in 1943, strongly indicates an official cover up or wilful refusal to solve the case.

A recent example of this was demonstrated in the exchange between magazine writer Michael Stern and George M. Shapiro, attorney for Governor Dewey.

Michael Stern not long ago told how "Lucky" Luciano, racketeer, had offered in 1943 to give Governor Dewey the names of Tresca's slayers in exchange for freedom. Dewey freed Luciano in 1946 without any reference to this offer of three years earlier. The Tresca case continues in police files as "unsolved."

Stern's statement about Luciano's offer of information on the Tresca case was attacked by George M. Shapiro, attorney for Governor Dewey, as "wholly false statements."

In the October Socialist Call Michael Stern replied to Dewey's attorney: "Luciano told me voluntarily of his offer in an interview in Rome (I had not mentioned the Tresca case to him), and his statement was subsequently confirmed by high-ranking law enforcement officials who knew about the offer when it was made."

LUCIANO PARDON

Involved in the controversy also were details about Dewey's mysterious pardoning of Luciano. Dewey cut forty years from the sentence of the now deported racketeer. The explanation that this was in return for secret aid rendered by Luciano to the war effort have now been thoroughly exploded.

Also raised in the Stern-Shapiro controversy was the question of why Dewey did not testify at the Kefauver hearings when one of the subjects which Senator Kefauver wished to question him about was the Luciano release.

Dewey's attorney has made much of the fact that last year the National Broadcasting Company apologized for statements made by Mr. Stern about the Luciano case.

To this Stern has made a crushing reply: "I made those statements on a show announcing the publication date of my book, 'No Innocence Abroad.' It was then that Governor Dewey sent identical two-page telegrams (signed by ex-Supreme Court Justice Bromley, then his attorney) threatening criminal libel prosecution, to the National Broadcasting Company, Random House, Fawcett Publications (which had published like statements in True Magazine), and to myself. NBC, being highly susceptible to political pressure, did, without any independent investigation, apologize. But Random House, Fawcett Publications, and I, being less susceptible to pressure, and perhaps fonder of upholding the truth, stuck to our guns and dared Mr. Dewey to carry out his threat — which he has never done."

"As proof of my accuracy," Mr. Stern continues, "I submit that in 25 years of hard journalism, during which I have written frankly and critically about many people of high and low degree, I have never lost a libel suit nor settled one out of court."

THOMAS' STATEMENT

Norman Thomas, head of the Tresca Memorial Committee, which follows every lead in the murder case and continually reminds the state and city politicians that the case remains unsolved, commented on the Stern-Shapiro exchange. He said: "This controversy arose from a statement Michael Stern gave our committee about an offer of information concerning the 1943 killing of Tresca, Italian editor, that Luciano said he made. He was freed by Governor Dewey in 1946 without reference to such an offer. The Call published the Stern statement in April. In July, as fair journalism, it carried Mr. Shapiro's denial that any such offer was made to the Governor."

WHO SIDETRACKED IT?

"Now comes Mr. Stern's reply. As the Tresca Committee's chairman, it is my business simply to stress one point: Since we have confidence that Mr. Stern reported the Luciano interview correctly, and since we can see no reason why Luciano should have lied to him in his voluntary, unsolicited declaration about the Tresca matter, the question remains: To what higher-up was Luciano's offer made? Or, as Mr. Stern worded it in his first statement, 'If the Governor did not receive and reject that proposal who did sidetrack it and thus block the course of justice?'"

... Reuther's War-Boom Strategy

But doesn't Reuther's demand for the guaranteed annual wage for auto workers with more than two years' seniority imply a real struggle? Not necessarily, from Reuther's point of view.

It is evident that Reuther thinks he can sell the GAW plan to the employers and avert a serious battle. He has already assured the corporations that his plan would not cost them a "red cent." By that he means that the employers will be able to avert an economic crisis and mass unemployment, thus reducing to a minimum any outlays under the GAW program.

What is his reasoning for this assumption? He doesn't believe that capitalism needs to face an inevitable crisis, IF IT RESORTS TO BIGGER AND BIGGER WAR PRODUCTION. But the union bureaucrats like Reuther, tied to the capitalist profit and war system, don't dare to say openly that their program for solving the capitalist unemployment problem is to support Wall Street's war program and its aims for world domination. They pretend that they are for war preparations for "defense" and that this is purely coincidental with their efforts to put forward some solution to the unemployment problem.

But if employment without reliance on another war boom, if genuinely peace-time full employment is the objective, then the shorter work-week appears as the natural, reasonable, desirable immediate answer to the problem. Not even a slick social demagogue like Reuther can find a plausible-sounding argument against this as a PEACE-TIME demand — the traditional demand for the shorter work-week that American labor has placed on its banner at every stage of its advance.

Reuther is counting on a bigger dose of war spending within the next year or two to prop up American capitalism, keep employment at a maximum and thus obviate the need for any real fight growing out of unemployment. And if even some of the capitalists are dubious about the efficacy of this program and sense great danger in reliance on a war economy to save their system, Reuther believes he can convince such "prophets of gloom" to accept his point of view.

FACES FIGHT ANYWAY

But Reuther may find his well-laid schemes for avoiding a real battle unavailing. The signs point rather to a tough attitude by the employers and their resistance to even the most alluring claims by Reuther that the GAW program won't cost them a "red cent." Reuther is merely helping to disarm the auto workers with illusory ideas that they can get something of genuine advantage and value without a fight.

Reuther, Meany and other labor bureaucrats who have no outlook beyond a war boom, who are loud-mouthed supporters of an ever more swollen militarism, who are ready to sacrifice the American working class to a bloody imperialist holocaust rather than come to grips with the real enemy of the working people, the capitalist profits system, are criminal traitors to the labor unions they purport to represent.

The workers do not want blood jobs; they want the full employment that is possible through maximum production of the things we all need so much — decent homes, more schools and hospitals, better roads, recreation centers, parks and playgrounds, autos and TVs for everyone, a vast outpouring of the products of peace. These things we will get when labor rejects the capitalist-dictated war program for prosperity that the Reuthers and Meany have embraced and when it enters the road of independent struggle, economic and political, that will lead to labor's own party, to a Workers and Farmers Government and to a non-profit socialist society.

Jim-Crow South Provides Haven For Open Shop

Dixiecrat control of a majority of committees in Congress as a result of the Democratic victory on Nov. 2, puts the spotlight squarely on union conditions in the South.

How do the unions fare in the home states of the new leaders in Congress? Eleven states of the Solid Democratic South enforce the most stringent kind of union-curbing measures, misnamed "right to work" laws.

The whole labor movement is thoroughly alarmed about these laws and afraid that they will spread like the plague from the original source of infection, the Ku Klux Klan ridden South. To date, seventeen states in all have enacted these "right to work" measures.

They are Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Arizona, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Iowa.

The designation of these laws as "right to work" measures is, of course, the most cynical kind of boss-class demagoguery. "Right to scab" laws is what they really are, as the CIO News, Oct. 11 correctly names them.

"The true purpose of these laws," said William Schnitzer, AFL Secretary-Treasurer, in a recent speech (AFL News-Reporter, Oct. 22), "is to deprive labor of the right to work in a union shop and to be represented by a strong and effective organization . . . Those same employers who, before strong unions were organized, kept their workers in . . . virtual penance . . . have the nerve to charge that a working man surrenders his freedom when he joins a union."

What is needed is another "Operation Dixie." There are powerful progressive winds blowing in the South. The great movement against segregation in schools, reinforced by the historic legal victory in the Supreme Court, is an expression of these forces. The stubborn and devious maneuvers of the southern plutocracy against the integration of schools stems from their understanding of the relation between the Jim Crow system and the maintenance of the Open Shop.

In the face of this employer consciousness the American labor movement must acquire at least an equal consciousness of its own interests. A new "Operation Dixie" would deal a devastating blow to the whole Jim Crow system in the South. At the same time the current struggle of the Negroes in the South against the system of race segregation and discrimination will powerfully aid a new unionization drive.

Thus the American Safety Razor Company of Brooklyn, manufacturer of Gem blades, is moving to Staunton, Virginia, where a "right to scab" law is in effect. It will operate there without a union contract. Many hundred union men and women employed by ASR in Brooklyn are to be thrown out of jobs as a result. That's what

... McCarthy Curb Ordered

(Continued from page 1) violations of Senate rules of orderly procedure and his reckless attacks against the Senate itself. As Art Preis explained in last week's Militant, they fear the threat that McCarthyism presents to democratic capitalist institutions — the traditional methods by which Big Business has ruled the country up to now.

Police state measures are compatible with that mode of rule, but a fascist dictatorship is not. And the dominant capitalist circles in the U.S. are not ready to swap constitutional government for fascism. They have therefore decided to place restrictions on McCarthyism.

Besides, Wall Street has now decided to reach a temporary agreement with the Kremlin and slow down the drive to war. The pro-Eisenhower leaders of the Republican Party do not want McCarthy to interfere with their diplomatic maneuvers by accusing them of "treason" and "pro-Communism." The censure resolution is therefore a warning that he must not impede the Eisenhower Administration and the Democratic leaders of the 84th Congress in the conduct of foreign affairs.

It can be established by hindsight that the decision of the ruling circles to check McCarthy was made last August. The recommendation of the Watkins Committee to censure McCarthy was the first move in that direction. Then the Republican Party strategists decided to keep McCarthy out of the election campaign, although last February, when McCarthy was riding high, they had decided to make him their star campaigner. McCarthyism got a setback in the elections and this bolstered the determination to push him to the side for the time being.

However, these ruling capitalist circles want only to curb McCarthy, not smash him. They act against the McCarthyites in such a way as to leave them plenty of room in which to maneuver and prepare a new offensive in the future.

the employers mean by the "right to work." The passage of these laws throughout the South is the result of a highly co-ordinated plan. With the failure of the CIO's southern organizing drive "Operation Dixie" after World War II, the union-hating employers saw their opportunity. They counter-attacked. The Taft-Hartley Law was not enough for them. They wanted to establish every legislative bulwark they could to prevent a successful "Operation Dixie" from materializing.

But the southern employers are tied by innumerable threads to the dominant billionaire interests of the corporations and banks in the North. The whole capitalist class in the U. S. regard the "right to scab" laws of the Southern States as their baby. They look to the South as a drill-ground for union-busting and union-preventing legislation. They hope to use this area as a jumping off place for national union-busting. As a matter of fact they have already succeeded in passing "right to scab" laws in a few northern states.

What is needed is another "Operation Dixie." There are powerful progressive winds blowing in the South. The great movement against segregation in schools, reinforced by the historic legal victory in the Supreme Court, is an expression of these forces. The stubborn and devious maneuvers of the southern plutocracy against the integration of schools stems from their understanding of the relation between the Jim Crow system and the maintenance of the Open Shop.

In the face of this employer consciousness the American labor movement must acquire at least an equal consciousness of its own interests. A new "Operation Dixie" would deal a devastating blow to the whole Jim Crow system in the South. At the same time the current struggle of the Negroes in the South against the system of race segregation and discrimination will powerfully aid a new unionization drive.

martyr-savior who continues the battle against the "Communist conspiracy" despite overwhelming odds. In the censure fight, the McCarthyite movement is hardening its fascist propaganda, consolidating a cadre and cementing protective alliances among all reactionary groups.

As William S. White correctly indicates in the N. Y. Times, Nov. 21, "the anti-censure forces have drawn up a cadre that clearly represents the largest reemergence and coming together of essentially Right-Wing groups since before . . . the Second World War." On the other hand, White says, "the pro-censure forces, while . . . formidable, have no such organizations visibly active."

That is why the McCarthyite movement, although curbed and forced to fight a rear guard battle, will not be eliminated by McCarthy's censure. It will continue to operate as an organized tendency in the political life of the U.S. and will continue to confront the labor movement with the menace of fascism.

Pay-off on Stalinist Support to Harriman

By Harry Ring

Since Nov. 5 the Daily Worker has been making an extensive analysis of the election returns. The main purpose of this analysis is to prove that the Stalinist policy of supporting the Democratic Party was vindicated by the results.

The analysis boils down to these principal points: Labor played a decisive role in the Democratic victory, particularly with its solid bloc votes in such key industrial states as Michigan and Pennsylvania; this vote expressed labor opposition to McCarthyism and the Big Business policies of the Republican Party; the Democratic victory was not as decisive as it could have been because the Democrats failed to put forward a program for peace and jobs, and in fact permitted the Republicans to appear as the "peace" party.

The conclusion drawn from this by the Stalinists is that the unions must organize for the 1955 elections so that they will become a strong enough force within the Democratic Party to compel it to adopt a program for peace and social progress.

According to Stalinist reasoning, the Democratic leadership simply doesn't understand on which side their bread is buttered and it is Labor's job to bring them to their senses. George Morris explains in the Nov. 14 Worker, "The truth is that the gains were small compared to what was possible. They came despite the stupid campaigning (our emphasis) of the Democrats who countered the demagogic 'peace' cries of the Republicans with attacks on the administration as not warlike enough."

This is followed in a Nov. 16 article by John Blumberg on "Why No Landslide" for the Democrats. The answer lies, he says, "above all in the stubborn refusal of the Democratic spokesmen and nominees to budge from their adherence to the bipartisan monopoly war plan." Therefore, according to the Stalinist line, deeper penetration into the Democratic Party by the unions is required to force the capitalist leaders of the party to change their course.

Down through the years, one of the persistent illusions prevalent in the American radical and labor movement, has been the utopian scheme that "due to the peculiarities of our two-party system," with its direct primary device, Labor will some day capture the Democratic Party. This is one idea that the Stalinists do not share. Even if it were a realizable goal the Stalinists would want no part of it. Their objective is not to dislodge the capitalists from control of the Democratic Party but to establish an alliance with them.

This was explained last May in the Stalinist magazine, Political Affairs, which declared that a progressive new administration would be established "by an exceedingly broad class alliance — the working class, the poor and middle farmers, the urban middle class, non-monopoly groupings of capital, and the less reactionary circles of Big Business."

Stripped of its "theoretical" pretensions, this is identical with the policy of the labor fakery who have in effect already achieved such a political alliance by their successful efforts to date in keeping the workers harassed to the Democratic Party. If this alliance is maintained it will be only at the most terrible price for the workers. All of contemporary American and European history has demonstrated that "less reactionary" sections of the capitalists are ready to enter into a political coalition with the workers, but only on the basis of the assurance that they will dominate in the "partnership," and that the coalition will be solidly based on a capitalist program. That program is based on the "bi-partisan" foreign policy which is leading America towards a police state and World War III. The capitalist leaders of the Democratic Party are indeed "stubborn," (although from their own class interests, certainly not "stupid") in their loyalty to such a program.

From the mountain of available evidence which proves that such alliances are made only at the expense of the workers' interests, we cite a small but instructive recent instance — and from the pages of the Daily Worker itself. The Democratic victory for the multi-millionaire Harriman was hailed by the Daily Worker as a triumph for New York Labor, one which they proudly boasted they had contributed to.

What is happening to this latest "triumph" for "coalition" politics, even before Harriman has taken office? The Nov. 19 Daily Worker glumly reports that, "Three of the extreme 'right wing' spokesmen within the Democratic Party were selected yesterday by Governor-elect Averell Harriman as an Advisory Committee to map the legislative and administrative program after he takes office in Albany next Jan. 1." The three appointees include Thomas K. Finletter, correctly described by the Daily Worker as "a 'get tough with Russia' advocate," Comptroller-elect Arthur Levitt, "who spearheaded the witch-hunt drive in the public school system," and Miles Lane, former U. S. Attorney, who prosecuted the first 13 Stalinists railroaded to jail under the Smith Act, and who played an important role in the legal lynching of the Rosenbergs.

Their appointment, says the Daily Worker, "is striking proof that the Farleyites (the openly anti-labor wing of the N. Y. Democratic Party led by James A. Farley) have gained a strategic inside vantage point to direct the Harriman administration policies." And that's exactly the way such deals inevitably wind up — with the reactionary capitalist politicians "inside" and the workers "outside."
